attempted to stop the Charger which continued for several more blocks before finally stopping. The driver would not turn off the engine, so finally the officers attempted to approach the Charger. The driver started yelling at the officers that she just bought the car a few minutes ago! She jumped out of the car and would not cooperate with the officers. Finally, the officers had to wrestle her to the ground to take her into custody. The victim arrived on scene and positively identified the driver as the woman who had hit her.

A warrant check revealed that the suspect had a warrant out for her arrest. The crime? Hit and Run ... She was booked at Bayview Station on the warrant, resisting arrest and hit and run charges.

The suspects grabbed the victims arms and then went through his pockets, taking a few dollars and the victim's empty wallet. Amazingly, the man's uncle disappeared during this incident, so the victim walked to the Fire Station on Shafter and waited for the police.

Because the victim lived out of town and now had no way to get back home, Officer Pai took him to the local BART station and arranged for him to ride home with the BART police.

The owner of the store has been advised several times that the BB guns are both illegal and dangerous. She agrees to stop selling them, but then they continue to appear in schools and on the streets, sometimes being mistaken for real guns.

The store owner, when confronted by police claimed to know nothing about BB guns, but then two cases of the guns were found in her storage room. The guns were seized and the owner was cited.

One final note .. on September 9, 2006, fellow officers and friends will be meeting to celebrate the life of Officer Nick Birco. God Bless you Nick. We miss you.
