The owner of the car was located and she identified the clothes and the purse belonging to her. Both men were read their rights and they stated that while one of them was acting as a lookout, the other saw a purse lying on the floor of the car and broke into it. Both men were booked for auto burglary and conspiracy. One of the arrested men has an open court case for the same exact crime. Although, one should not have their car broken into we ask people to help themselves by not leaving valuables in plain view in their cars. The list includes obvious items such as purses, luggage, and computers, but also includes loose change, cigarettes, and sunglasses. If you are going to hide these items in your trunk do so before you park your car. Would be criminals will watch you and just wait for you to leave the area.
